Andy couldn't wait to get his new glasses. He had been squinting and straining to see for so long, and now, finally, he would be able to see the world clearly.

When Andy put on his new glasses, it was like a whole new world had opened up to him. He could see the leaves on the trees, the patterns on the butterfly's wings, and the tiny ants marching along the sidewalk.

Andy was so excited, he ran outside to explore. He looked up at the sky and saw the clouds floating by. He looked down at the ground and saw the flowers blooming. He looked all around him and saw the world in a whole new light.

Andy had so much fun exploring with his new glasses. He couldn't wait to see what else he could discover.

As the sun began to set, Andy made his way home. He was tired from all the exploring he had done, but he was also very happy.

Andy's mom was waiting for him at the door. She could see the excitement in his eyes.

"How do you like your new glasses?" she asked.

"I love them!" Andy exclaimed. "I can see everything so clearly now."

Andy's mom smiled. She was glad that her son was so happy.

"I'm glad you like them," she said. "Now go get ready for bed. It's time for your bedtime story."

Andy went to his room and got ready for bed. He put on his pajamas and brushed his teeth. Then he climbed into bed and waited for his mom to come in.

Andy's mom came in and sat down on the edge of his bed. She opened a book and began to read.

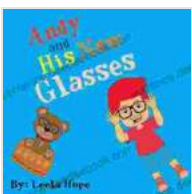

Andy listened to the story, but his eyes kept drifting to the window. He could see the moon shining in the sky. He could see the stars twinkling. He could see the world outside his window, and it was all so beautiful.

Andy's mom finished the story and closed the book. She kissed Andy on the forehead and turned off the light.

Andy lay in bed and looked up at the ceiling. He could see the moon and the stars, and he could see the world outside his window. He was so happy to have his new glasses. He could finally see the world clearly, and it was more beautiful than he had ever imagined.

Andy closed his eyes and drifted off to sleep. He dreamed of all the adventures he would have with his new glasses. He dreamed of exploring the world and seeing all its wonders.

Andy's new glasses had opened up a whole new world to him, and he couldn't wait to see what the future held.
