Room Service: The Innkeepers is a 2011 supernatural horror film directed by Ti West and starring Sara Paxton and Pat Healy. The film follows two innkeepers who investigate paranormal activity at their historic hotel.

The film opens with Claire (Paxton) and Luke (Healy), two young innkeepers who are working the last shift at the Yankee Pedlar Inn, a historic hotel that is set to be demolished. The hotel is said to be haunted by the ghost of Madeline O'Malley, a former guest who died in the hotel in the 1960s.

Claire and Luke are initially skeptical of the rumors about the hotel's haunted past. However, they soon begin to experience strange and unexplained events, including disembodied voices, flickering lights, and moving objects. As the nights go on, the paranormal activity becomes more intense, and Claire and Luke begin to fear for their lives.

Room Service: The Innkeepers is a well-crafted and suspenseful horror film that effectively uses atmosphere and mood to create a sense of dread. The film's setting, the Yankee Pedlar Inn, is a character in its own right, and the film's use of long takes and eerie sound design helps to create a truly immersive experience.

Sara Paxton and Pat Healy give strong performances as Claire and Luke, and they bring a sense of realism and vulnerability to their roles. The film's script is also well-written, and it does a good job of building tension and suspense.

If you're a fan of ghost stories or horror movies, then you'll definitely want to check out Room Service: The Innkeepers. It's a well-made and suspenseful film that will keep you on the edge of your seat from beginning to end.
